

Intersections of IPV and VAC: Expert Perspectives on Improving Service Coordination in Kampala, Uganda

“Many organizations are not doing gender transformative programming, their work only stops at awareness raising and when people have a lot of knowledge but do not know how to transform it, it becomes problematic now; they fear to try new changes, they revert back to the old way of doing things that they know... So you wonder why are we doing so much work and there is no change... Most programs are ending at awareness raising and they are not helping communities to act on their awareness, they expect much.”
