

SUPPORT FOR CHILD SURVIVORS OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE IN ZAMBIA: A POLICE RESPONSE MODEL

N. Chelwa¹, K.Hemal¹, G.M.Phiri², M. Mbizvo¹ and C.Undie³

¹Population Council (Zambia), ²Zambia Police Services, ³Population Council (Nairobi)

The Police response model...

- The intervention sought to:
 - eliminate transportation barriers to health facilities for survivors,
 - maintain the police provision of EC and
 - strengthen police and health provider ability to care for child survivors.

- Our definition of Feasibility:

Acceptability

- Is the intervention suitable, satisfying, or attractive

Demand

- Is the intervention is likely to be used

Implementation

- Can the intervention can be successfully delivered in the dynamic contexts of police stations & health facilities in Zambia

- Findings:
 1. The intervention promoted the linking of child survivors to a health facility (UTH).
 2. Stakeholders viewed transportation as critical for improving child survivors' access to the health facility
 3. Police presence promoted child survivors' access to care within the health facility
 4. Training/sensitization on national guidelines promoted intra-sectoral action (within police sector, health sector) and inter-sectoral action (between police, health, justice sectors)

Full details of the study:

- Full study report available in the back of the room
- For details reach out:
 - nchelwa@popcouncil.org
 - mmbizvo@popcouncil.org
 - cundie@popcouncil.org